Royals' Losing Streak now at 11

The Kansas City Royals losing streak is now at 11 games, after the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Royals 4-1 Monday to complete a four game sweep.

Kansas City is 0-10 at home, and is the first team to lose its first 10 games at home since the Chicago Cubs dropped 12 in a row at Wrigley Field to start the 1994 season.

Despite the losing streak, Royals manager Ned Yost is not panicking. (play audio :20)

Right fielder Jeff Francoeur says the team is playing tentatively right now. (play audio :09)

The Royals look to snap their 11-game losing streak when they open a series at Cleveland tonight.
