

<http://www.MSCNews.net/news/index.cfm?nk=39365>

Soybean Workshops Planned in Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - A series of four workshops for soybean farmers will be held across the state in August.

Farmers can learn some of the latest research-based ideas for making their soybean-growing operations more profitable.

The workshops sponsored by the Nebraska Soybean Board will feature experts from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Extension program.

The workshops will be held at four different farms on Aug. 12-15, starting at 9 a.m. each day. The farms where the workshops will be held are near Auburn, near Shickley, near Belgrade and near Snyder.

More information is available online at <http://ardc.unl.edu/soydays>.

Associated Press