

<http://www.MSCNews.net/news/index.cfm?nk=76458>

No blue green algae threat at Atchison lake

(KAIR)--Atchison's Warnock Lake is no longer considered a threat for blue green algae.

That word came Friday from the Kansas Department of Health and Environment.

The lake had most recently been placed under a watch status by the state health agency. That came after a period of the lake being placed under a warning status.

According to KDHE, the presence of blue green algae can prove harmful to both people, pets, and livestock.

Many Signals Communications