In 1966, Jim lost his left hand in a work accident and was known around Sabetha as "the man with the hook". Jim loved children and his hook was one thing that all little ones noticed, so he loved to tell those brave enough to ask him that an alligator bit it off.

Jim spent every summer fishing, camping, boating, coaching baseball and umpiring both baseball and softball games for years. Jim even came out of retirement in 2013 and umpired four games with his granddaughter, Samantha White.

Jim also spent many years at the local gyms, either refereeing basketball games or cheering and offering the kids coaching advice. He was an avid bowler for many years and received many awards and trophies. Jim later donated all his trophies to the youth bowling league in Sabetha. He retired from bowling when the Sabetha Bowling Alley burned.

Jim always put others in front of his needs and was a very giving man. Jim loved his family and after his retirement he visited his mother every day to eat breakfast with her and spend time visiting. He loved his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren and attended as many of their activities as possible.
