

<http://www.MSCNews.net/news/index.cfm?nk=16790>

Art & Soul Fest Saturday in Atchison

(KAIR) -- This Saturday, several traditional farming, hunting and baking methods will be on display at the second Art & Soul Fest in Rural Atchison.

It will be at Providence Hill Farm from one to eight and is free and open to the public.

Owner Christy Harris says a full slate of events will be on display.

(Play Audio) RT: :36

The events will then continue at four with Heartland Honey making a presentation on beekeeping.

(Audio Continues) RT: :32

Other activities include live music throughout the day, including Kansas City artist Eddie Edwards playing his mandolin.

Thirty-five vendors will also be on display featuring hand-made items.

Harris says she hopes these kinds of events can help promote agri-tourism.

(Audio Continues) RT: :27

Over 500 people attended the first event in the spring.

Providence Hill Farm is located on 8096 Pratt Road, northwest of Atchison.

Many Signals Communications